

COMMENTS ON FALL 2008 STANDINGS AND IMPACT ON SPRING 2009

Our reported results are incomplete. Below is what I believe are the current projected winners:

Men's Division 1 – BAAC is the winner

Men's Division 2 – BAAC 2 is the winner

Men's Over-30 Division 1 – Celtics is the winner

Men's Over-30 Division 2 – A TIE! Because head-to-head results did not decide a winner, these teams must technically meet in a play-off game to decide a winner. I have asked Donna, assuming the results I have are correct, to get with the team reps and work something out.

Men's Masters – Although tied in points, I show the head-to-head results in favor of Kilkenny's, a win and a tie. This would make Kilkenny's the winner.

Women's Division 1 – BAAC Ladies is the winner.

Women's Division 2 – BA Kicks is the winner.

SPRING 2009

Winning teams are likely to move up a division, where applicable. Second place, and even third place, teams are also very possible candidates to move up depending upon what teams register for the Spring 2009 season. Last place teams will LIKELY be moved down a division, where applicable. This will be following guidelines that were unanimously passed by you a couple years ago.

Missing results and forfeits may be considered as wins when deciding where to place teams for the Spring 2009. If you played a match and lost, and want this considered, then it would help for you to get information to Donna as best you can.

If you do not want to move up to the top division, but are on the verge of doing so, then you had better start campaigning for the team reps to vote for some other divisional alignment in the Spring, recruit new teams to join NEOASA at the top level to fill your spot(s), or (hopefully not) choose to withdraw from league play.

This is posted to reduce the chances of having teams strangely shocked by their divisional placement at the Schedule Meeting next February. Again, we will set a commitment deadline for teams to register, and it is only AFTER we have a head count that teams will be assigned to divisions, weighing in their fall performances.
